FAQ's about Botanical Hair Restoration

What is botanical hair restoration? Botanical hair restoration is a 100% natural oil treatment applied to the scalp to re-grow hair for both men and women. Treatment is a process:

- A special blend of oils are heated and massaged into the scalp for approximately 10 minutes by one of our clinically trained medical assistants
- This relaxing procedure is performed on a bi-weekly basis for the first 4 treatments, followed by monthly treatments thereafter
- The oil remains in the hair overnight and is shampooed as usual in the morning. The day after treatment the hair will appear fuller and well-conditioned
- Over time, typically within 6-8 weeks, individuals begin to notice new growth at the hairline or areas of the scalp that contain only very fine hair

Why might botanical hair restoration be recommended for me?

Individuals with thinning hair, alopecia areata, and dry or patchy hair loss have utilized this treatment extensively over the past ten years, with great success.

What should I know about botanical hair restoration?

- There is no downtime and normal activity may be resumed immediately
- With continued use, typical results will be hair that appears thicker, fuller and often with new growth of hair evident
- Clinical trials of our exclusive, (patent pending) botanical hair oil treatment are in final stages at the Hair Restoration Institute, now located at the Center for Aesthetics and Plastic Surgery. If you have hair that is thinning, patchy, or areas of baldness, you may wish to join one of our ongoing clinical trials. We anticipate the launch of our complete botanical hair restoration product line and protocol by September of 2009
- All procedures carry the potential for risks that will be fully discussed with you during your consultation
